CONFEDERATE GUNS INTERESTING STUDY

By Calvin Robinson
Editor, Times-Virginian

One reason for the fabulous continuing interest in the Civil War is the sheer fact of its magnitude for actual fighting.

No other war has been studied so minutely. The sustained interest shows no sign of waning. Instead, it is even now increasing and looking forward to the Centennial Years.

The North had 23 States, with a population of 22 millions. The South had 11 States, with 11 millions, with approximately one-third Negro.

On both sides, more than 600,000 lost their lives. That means that more Americans died in the Civil War than in World Wars I and II combined, although in the later wars vastly larger numbers were involved. The Civil War was a bruising, killing was rather than of the skirmish and maneuver type of the more modern wars, wherein a vast number of the participants were not to experience killing action.

There were 57 varieties of guns used by the Confederate Army alone. They used what they could get. They used U. S. Army regulations seized in arsenals and armories at the beginning of the war. They used private arms with. They used captured arms with. They managed to capture, and finally they managed to manufacture a few guns of their own.

It is interesting to note the use of private arms. In 1862, the following law was enacted by the Confederacy: "That each man, who may be mustered into service, and who shall arm himself with a musket, shotgun, rifle or carbine, accepted as an efficient weapon, shall be paid the value thereof, to be ascertained by the mustering officer under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War, if he is willing to sell the same, and if he is not, then he shall be entitled to receive $1.00 a month for the use of said received and approved musket, rifle, shotgun or carbine."

The most complete work I have seen on Confederate guns, is by Martin Wagel, published by Pioneer Press, Harriman, Tennessee. Locally, a copy is owned by J. Allen Gills.

Washington Notes

Wheat Bill Bogged Down

The chairman and ranking Republican member of the Senate Agriculture Committee say there's little chance for adoption of legislation at this session of Congress to aid the wheat industry, bogged down with a record surplus.

Assistance For Burma

The United States has announced that it is willing to give Burma —and Burma is willing to receive— up to $37,900,000 in economic assistance in the next four years.

This means that Burma has reversed her six-year-long refusal to accept aid as a gift from the United States. She asked the United States to suspend all aid in 1953 after it had been charged that Chinese Nationalist guerillas in northern Burma had received American support.

Both the State Department and the Burmese Embassy have declined to say that the reversal represents a change in Burma's neutralist foreign policy.

Foreign Aid Bill

The Senate has passed a heavily cut foreign aid authorization bill after six days of protracted political fighting. The vote was 65 to 26.

Rise in Water Projects

The Senate Appropriations Committee has approved a bill carrying $1,258,836,300 for the construction and planning of water projects in the current fiscal year.

Reserve Bill Passed

A bill extending the military reserve enlistment program for four years has been passed by the Senate by voice vote and sent to the White House.

The measure provides that men up to 18½ years old may enlist for six months' active duty training and seven and one-half years in the Reserve.

For those over 18½, the program embraces six months of active duty and five and one-half years in the Reserve.

The bill would continue the program until Aug. 1, 1963.

IN THIS NUCLEAR AGE

CD's a Vital Part of Farm Safety

Civil and Defense Mobilization Director Lee A. Hoegh in a Farm Safety Week statement urges farmers to accept Rural Civil Defense as a vital part of farm safety in this nuclear age.

Mr. Hoegh pointed out that fallout from nuclear attack on key military, metropolitan and industrial centers could cover hundreds of thousands of square miles of the United States.

* * *

"EVERY FARM family, no matter how remote it may be from a target," he said, "should build a family fallout shelter and stock it properly. This means providing a two-week supply of food and water, a battery radio, a first-aid kit, flashlights, bedding and other items that would be essential to your survival."

Mr. Hoegh said Farm Safety Week, July 19-25, serves to remind farmers of the need to recognize and support the objectives of the Farm Division of the National Safety Council.

* * *

He said: "This nation cannot survive and recover from attack without its farmers. Rural America has always carried a heavy burden in times of national emergency. In this nuclear age, it is more important than ever before."

Mr. Hoegh pointed out that fallout is one menace of thermonuclear attack against which simple protective ... be taken.

FALLOUT SHELTERS are the best way for rural Americans to protect themselves from a massive nuclear attack which could unleash dangerous radioactive fallout throughout the country. Some of the shelters recommended by the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization are not as elaborate as this one, which includes an auxiliary generator and an electric air filtering and ventilating system. However, all recommended shelters should include the basic features of shelter —a place to sleep; food, water and medical supplies, and at least eight inches of earth or an equal weight of other materials for adequate shelter against fallout. Free copies may be obtained by writing to OCDM Battle Creek, Mich.

Wheat Quotas Are Approved

Incomplete but conclusive results of a referendum held July 23 in the commercial wheat states show that farmers for the seventh consecutive year approved a marketing quota program, this time for the 1960 wheat crop.

The preliminary national results indicate 160,718 votes for quotas, and 38,522 votes against quotas. This is approval by 80.7 per cent—well over the necessary two-thirds majority required.

Reports from the 44 principal wheat-producing counties in Virginia indicate 884 votes for and 184 votes against quotas, for a majority of 82.8 per cent. About 35 per cent of Virginia's some 4,000 eligible voters participated in the referendum.

With the approval of marketing quotas for the 1960 wheat crop a farmer who complies with his farm wheat allotment will be eligible for price support loans based on a national average of at least $1.77 per bushel representing 75 per cent of parity. The support price of wheat in Virginia is usually somewhat higher than the national level, ranging from $1.98 to $2.01 per bushel for the 1959 crop.

All farmer sreceived 1960 wheat allotment notices prior to voting in the referendum.

Dennis Torrence Wins Scholarship

Dennis Wayne Torrence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Torrence, of Route 2, Appomattox, has won a Smith-Douglas Fertilizer Company for Future Farmers in Virginia. This scholarship is one of the more substantial ones awarded by serving F .F. A. members. Continuation of the scholarship is contingent on the receiving getting satisfactory grades each year.

Dennis plans to use this money to pay part of his through the Virginia Polytechnic Institue, where he will enroll this fall. Dennis graduated this past June from the Appomattox High School. He applied for the scholarship through the Vocational Education Department of V. P. I. He plans to enroll in the Agricultural Education Department of V. P. I.

An outstanding all - round student, Dennis has won many honors during his high school career. During his senior year he was president of the student council, and vice-president of the Robert E. Lee chapter, F. F. A. At the State F. F. A. Rally in June he was chosen reporter for the State Association, Future Farmers of America. Dennis last week attended the first National Leadership Training School held by the Future Farmers of America. This school was held in Washington, D. C.

Thor Bases in Britain

London.- The vice chief of British's air staff says Thor intermediate range ballistic rocket bases being set up in England by the United States - supplied missiles are about ready for use in the event of war.

Air Marshal Sir Edmund C. Huddleston told touring American newsmen that the bases are "approximately ready to go" in any emergency.

The Silent Treatment

Tokyo.- Police recently questioned four men charged with picking pockets for half an hour without one of the men answering a question.

Eventually, as the police were beginning to lose their patience, one of them wrote on a piece of paper and handed it to the police:

It read: "We are all deaf and dumb."

A. H. S. CLASS OF '34 HAD REUNION HERE

Fourteen members of the Appomattox High School graduating class of 1934 and their families celebrated their 25th reunion last Saturday evening at the American Legion Home.

The graduating class consisted of thirty-four memebrs, three of whom are deceased: Miss Hazel Coleman, Robert Chilton, and Melvin Caldwell. Everyone paussed in silence in memory of these, and also an arrangement of flowers was placed in the center of the picnic table in their memory.

Everyone enjoyed a bountiful picnic supper, after which the class song was sung.

Entertainment was provided by Freddie Mitchell, son of Pearl Burnette Mitchell, singing a song with the words written by Mary Anna McDearmon, daughter of Willie G. McDearmon, and Catherine Grey Richardson, daughter of Thomas Richardson, accompaning him at the piano.

A poem, "High School Days," written by Robert Chilton, was read by Christine Roberts Whitehead. The historian of the class, Rachel Woodson Quicenyo, of Green Village, New Jersey, read the history of the class. The prophecy of the class, written by Lloyd Martin Smith, of Lynchburg, was read by her.

After roll call each member present gave a short resume of his or her life in the past 25 years.

Mrs. Helene Welch Harvey was the only member of the faculty present for the happy occasion.

Supt. of Schools, Mr. Jerry A. Burke, and Mrs. Burke were also present.

Letters of regret from members of the class who were unable to be present were read by Thomas Richardson and Pearl B. Mitchell.
